1. The property listed in this catalog is offered for sale by CNA, Ltd. as agents for various owners and other consignors. We reserve the right to withdraw any lot before the close of the sale.
2. There is a 10% buyer's fee that will be added to all invoices at the close of the sale.
3. All coins are guaranteed genuine and as described based on the most current information available to the cataloguer. Grading is a subjective art. Every effort has been made to be conservative in our grading. Please note that an auction sale is not an approval sale. Lots examined prior to the sale may not be returned for any reason except authenticity.
4. Terms are for cash, with invoices being due and payable immediately upon receipt. Payment by check must be made in US funds and drawn on a United States bank. Visa and Mastercard may be used to pay your bill. However, a 3.5% surcharge is made for the use of your credit card. (Our cost from the bank.).
5. Bidders not known to us must provide us with satisfactory credit references. Minors are forbidden from bidding without a parent's signature on the bid sheet.
6. Bid in even dollar amounts. Mail Bidder Protection. You may submit bids with confidence. Where competition permits, your bids will be executed at 10% over the next highest bid. Please note, that most bids below estimate are rarely reduced, due to heavy competition. If you bid over estimate, chances are that your bids will be reduced. In the case of tie bids - the bid received earliest wins. Bid by lot number. No lots will be broken.
7. A word on Reserves. If a lot is reserved, it will not be in excess of the estimate. However, please note that bids that are below 60% of the estimate have little or no chance of winning, or being executed. Check your bid sheets carefully. The seller cannot assume responsibility for errors made by bidders.
8. Sales tax and postage are added to all invoices where appropriate.
9. Prices Realized are published shortly after the sale and mailed to all bidders who have participated in the sale.
10. If you bid in this sale, you accept the terms as outlined above. Any legal disputes that might arise will be handled in the courts of Lancaster County, Pennsylvania.

An interesting story about a wrestling match between Apollo and Herakles was published with this coin in our CNR XV, 4 last year. A very interesting story, but it has nothing to do with the coin. Other specimens show clearly a thyrsos next to one figure, identifying him as Dionysos. He and Herakles were patron gods of athletic games held at Laodikeia, hence the two of them shown participating in one of the events.

A Selection of Coins Depicting Ancient Architecture

Like many modern cities, cities of antiquity took great pride in their distinctive civic architecture. This pride is preserved in the numerous Greek Imperial coins bearing representations of the temples, sanctuaries, marketplaces and other civic monuments of the ancient world. Price and Trell record over 800 such coins in their book 'Coins and their Cities', and there is probably an equal number for Imperial monuments on Roman coins of the same period, the 1st through 3rd centuries AD.

These architectural motifs reflect the spirit of 'philopatris' or 'urbanitas' that dominated civic life of the period. More than a duty, it was considered a honor for prominent citizens and magistrates to embellish their community with magnificent building programs, accompanied by the appropriate festivals and games. (Although surely there was more than a little self-interested self-promotion in both the construction of these buildings and their commemoration on the coinage). The Emperor himself also provided funds for the construction of temples of the Imperial cult, called 'neocorate.' Some of the multiple temples shown on coins of Nicomedia (587) and Pergamon (588) are neocorate temples dedicated by successive emperors; Ephesos had the most with four and crowded all of them onto one coin. (See Price and Trell, figure 242.)

There were temples of the emperors, of Zeus in his numerous manifestations, Artemis, Asklepios, Astarte and the other gods. There were shrines for sacred spots and the Tyche, or goddess of good fortune, that each city claimed as its protector. Secular architecture was not ignored; there were public buildings, arches, city gates, harbors and marketplaces. The dupondius of Nero (799) shows the two-story Macellum Magnum constructed in Rome during his reign. Would anyone today mark the opening of a new shopping mall in this way? But certainly the most impressive piece of design occurs when the entire city is depicted in the round, as at Nicaea (584-586).

The efforts of die engravers to transfer architecture to medallic design have always intrigued scholars. Often it is said that little can be learned of the true nature of ancient structures from their depictions on coins. That they are the result of sloppy or fanciful draftmanship by workmen who were either not talented enough or ignorant on the subject of architecture. It appears, however, that much of the problem lies in our lack of understanding of the conventions used by ancient artists. Indeed, it seems that the ancients knew as much about perspective drawing as modern architects, and were quite skillful in transferring that knowledge to coin design. The design of the sanctuary of Zeus Katabaites at Zeugma (599-601), long thought to be crudely depicted as a temple on a rather strange looking mountain, is now regarded as a exercise in perspective, showing a temple at the end of a long, colonnaded, wooded courtyard with portico.

Another thing to keep in mind is that these designs were not meant to be photographic likenesses; instead important elements were emphasized or brought together in ways that highlighted the special character of each building. Thus a shrine might be brought forward from the dark interior to the porch of a temple, or various scattered buildings might be clustered in an imposing civic panorama. Given these variables, the basic plan and many details of ancient buildings can be recovered from the coins. The layout of a city can be understood, or the facade of a temple can be reconstructed when the ground plan is revealed archaeologically. On some coins the Corinthian capitals on the front columns are clearly depicted (579, 581), and sculpture can be seen in the pediment, or on the roof (called akrotereia - 606). When all the evidence is brought together, some of the life of the ancient city is restored to modern times. For scholars in the fields of art, architecture, archaeology and history the monuments on ancient coins comprise an invaluable source of information, and for collectors, a fascinating series to investigate.

The city walls of Nicaea, modern Iznik, were begun after the devastating Gothic attack of 256 AD. Much of the walls remain extant in modern times.

Market weights were used locally in France and were known as Livrals or Pesons. In medieval France there was not any uniform weight standard. Each province's standards were set by the local ruling class. Uniformity of weights was not introduced in France until the French Revolution. The dates on these pieces is most likely a legislative date by which the weight standard was set. These pieces are definitely medieval by their fabric.
